How to verify an African iGaming SEO partner

Four tests for European operators evaluating agencies for expansion into African markets.

Olúwatóbi (Tobi) Adébóyè
iGaming SEO | Africa market entry | Lagos

Swipe >

Check their grasp of multiple English dialects

Nigeria, Kenya, Ghana, and South Africa all use business English alongside local slang. One single page never fits all four markets.

Olúwatóbi (Tobi) Adébóyè
iGaming SEO | Africa market entry | Lagos

Swipe >

Ask about currency and payment habits

Nairas, shillings, cedis, and rands each require distinct localization. Mobile money and bank transfers dictate search intent across regions.

Olúwatóbi (Tobi) Adébóyè
iGaming SEO | Africa market entry | Lagos

Swipe >

Examine how they handle local football terms

European club football and local leagues shape search queries. Generic terminology fails to connect with local bettors on the ground.

Olúwatóbi (Tobi) Adébóyè
iGaming SEO | Africa market entry | Lagos

Swipe >

Look for regulatory awareness without legal advice

Agencies must understand regional licensing frameworks from bodies like NLRC and BCLB without substituting for proper local legal counsel.

Olúwatóbi (Tobi) Adébóyè
iGaming SEO | Africa market entry | Lagos

Swipe >

Demand reporting in actual business metrics

Traffic alone hides performance. Insist on metrics that track real player value, reporting in terms like FTDs rather than vanity numbers.

Olúwatóbi (Tobi) Adébóyè
iGaming SEO | Africa market entry | Lagos

Swipe >

Verify remote delivery and time zone alignment

Lagos sits on West Africa Time, matching Central European Time in winter. Seamless remote collaboration requires established cross-border experience.

Olúwatóbi (Tobi) Adébóyè
iGaming SEO | Africa market entry | Lagos

Message me to discuss your strategy for entering African markets.

Message me on Telegram: t.me/Tobeyh

Olúwatóbi (Tobi) Adébóyè

iGaming SEO | Africa market entry | Lagos